NORWAY AND VICINITY.

Review of Old Home Paper.

Howard Laselle sends us ancient local papers. Among them is the Amateur, printed in Norway, Dec. 1, 1890. It was gotten out to advertise a dramatic club, and contained six columns, of which four are advertising.

Among the advertisers who are now with us appear the names of J. T. Rowe, Barber, J. O. Crooker and F. H. Noyes. These three are the only ones still in business.

Those out are A. J. Rowe; Burnham, the photographer; F. W. Fannoe, C. S. Cummings, John F. Fitts, F. H. True, Cyrus S. Tucker, Jackson Clark, F. C. Elliott, E. W. Howe, M. M. Phinney, Mason Brothers, John F. Allen and W. H. Whitcomb.

The play was entitled, "Out in the Street," with John F. Fitts as stage manager, and W. S. Abbott as musical director.

A copy of The True Religion of April 6, 1892, was handed us. Rev. J. A. Seitz, editor. It is announced that The True Religion was to be changed to The True Religion, and the format of the paper made sixteen pages instead of four.

Among the interesting locals, we note Harry R. Virgin of Portland, visiting relatives here and the Cobblers. The shoe factory band stand was moved to Bass Island, by Levi Frost. At the school meeting R. E. Clement was moderator, with E. H. Brown, clerk, and Capt. W. W. Whitmarsh was elected agent. Harry Lane had moved his tailoring business into the building now occupied by the O. P. Brooks market. It gives a description of the new shoe factory at South Paris and says its proprietors, Messrs. W. A. Frothingham & Co., are to make men's and boys' shoes and farmers' slippers. None of the advertisers then appearing are now in business excepting the Norway National Bank in which a statement of its condition appears. The loans and discounts were $72,000, individual deposits subject to check, $70,000.

Another of the ancient papers was the ADVERTISER of August 19, 1887. This paper was printed five years after we commenced publishing the paper, and before us it does not seem very old, yet to Laselle, it is ancient. Among those who advertise in it and are out of business we note the following:—Dr. H. H. Tukey, dentist; George P. Jones, dentist; Henry Epton, lawyer; Bearce & Starks, lawyers; A. N. French, M. D.; O. N. Bradbury, M. D.; George W. Hazleton, M. D.; L. W. Jackson, Jr., Paris House; A. C. Jones, machinist; A. J. Rowe, insurance; Jonathan Blake, deputy sheriff; Dr. C. L. Pike's centennial poem; C. B. Adams, groceries; W. H. Chaney, painter; J. F. Gibson, farm for sale; G. V. Crocker, tailor; Horace Cole, jeweler; C. G. Mason, hardware. All of these we believe have crossed the great divide and have joined the silent majority.

Of those who still survive are B. F. Bradbury, M. D.; Fred L. Millett, picture

Stop Women And Consider

This Fact—that in addressing Mrs. Pinkham you are confiding your private ills to a woman—a woman whose experience with women's diseases covers twenty-five years.

The present Mrs. Pinkham, daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, was for years under her direction, and has ever since her decease continued to advise women.

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing well that they ought to have immediate assistance, but a natural modesty causes them to shrink from exposing themselves to the questions and probable examinations of even their family physician. Such questioning and examination is unnecessary. Without cost you can consult a woman whose knowledge from actual experience is great.

MRS. PINKHAM'S STANDING INVITATION:

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established this confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken. Never has she published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.

Out of the vast volume of experience which Mrs. Pinkham has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge needed in your case. She asks nothing in return except your good will, and her advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. Address Mrs. Pinkham, care of Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

History of the Irish Potato.

From the common name, Irish potato, many have supposed that we are indebted to Ireland for this useful vegetable. The reverse, however, is true, says an exchange, for in 1555 Sir Walter Raleigh, having obtained some of the tubers from Spanish sailors who brought them as a part of their cargo to the colonies, had them planted on his estate near Cork. It was not until the middle of the eighteenth century that the potato was generally cultivated, even in Ireland. In the United States it is called Irish potato to distinguish it from the sweet potato, and because it has become the principal food staple of Ireland.

The potato is a native of China. It was introduced by a monk into Spain, from which country it has extended slowly over the greater part of Europe.

In America the potato was first raised in Virginia and North Carolina. It is well adapted for a universal vegetable, since it will thrive in almost any place between the Arctic and Antarctic circles. For this reason it is more widely cultivated and eaten by all classes and nations than any other vegetable.

In the days of Queen Elizabeth potatoes were a luxury, which only the rich could afford, as much as $1.25 being paid for one pound.

Many times a day in some form we meet the potato. The gum that sticks the stamp to a letter is made of dextrine from the potato; much of our laundry starch comes from the same source. Many of the substances commonly sold as arrowroot, tapioca and other farinaceous compounds are often formed from potato, flour or starch.

In 1836 in the city of Paris, 40,000 tons of potatoes were converted into flour for making bread. There are said to be 25 ways of cooking potatoes so we need never tire of this staple vegetable, but should remember that it is chiefly for its bulk that we need and use it for a food rather than for its nutritive value, since the potato is mainly composed of water, containing 78.9 per cent, water, 18 per cent, starch, protein 2.1 per cent, mineral matter, .9 per cent, fat, .1 per cent.

The sweet potato, though similar to the white potato, is the fleshy root of the plant; it belongs to a different family and contains a large percentage of sugar. These potatoes cannot be raised in high altitudes nor do they keep so well as the white or Irish potato.

C. H. Ford, the veteran printer of Portland, is about to move to South Waterford, where he has bought a handsome house and considerable land and where he expects to pass many happy days. The change is made on account of the poor health of Mrs. Ford, which necessitates a change into the country.

The Worn-Out Farm.

A long-abandoned farm is not as difficult to restore to fertility as one that has been worn out by successive cropping by a man who does not understand his business, or who is hiring the place from another, and does not care how much the soil is robbed, says the Maritime Farmer. Many farms that have been left idle for several years have, to a certain extent, restored some fertility to the soil by the natural process. Many leaves, vines, stocks, and even weeds will add a certain amount of humus and nitrogen matter to the soil each year. If such land is plowed twice a year, so that soil can digest and assimilate the plant life that has accumulated there, it will be found to be in a fair way to recuperate.

It is not such a difficult matter to restore a run-down or a worn-out farm as some people imagine. It simply requires a little practical and scientific knowledge put into operation by a man who is not easily discouraged. Many a poor man has made his mark in farming on just such worn-out farms. It is possible today for a farmer to take a worn-out farm and build it up to a paying basis, supporting himself meanwhile. Farms of this character can be purchased reasonably cheap in many parts of the country to the farmer's treatment for a long term of years, with renewal clause attached.

The first thing to do in restoring such a farm is to get a crop of some green stuff. It is easy to start a crop of rye by fall plowing, scratching the ground just enough to cover the seeds a little. Then by the following spring when the rye is up it should be plowed under. This makes a good starter, and then by adding crops of grass and clover to the rye the soil will soon get the nourishment that it has so long lacked.

In most worn-out farms the soil is stiff and hard, and during dry weather the surface bakes so hard that it is difficult to force a plow through it. There are two remedies for this. One is to work more plant manure into the soil, which makes it porous, and the other is to underdrain it. If the soil does not respond to the former treatment it will often take the place of commercial fertilizers and barnyard manure, although all of the latter that one possibly can secure should be mixed up with the soil at every plowing.

In a Buddhist temple at Bangkok, Siam, there burns a fire which in a season, is the oldest fire in the world. Every fourth year at a certain period the priests of the temple light a fresh fire in a big brazier, this new fire being kindled with a brand from the fire that has been burning in the brazier for the previous four years, and this custom has been kept up for more than two centuries.

Government Seeds.

Your correspondent was the fortune-teller (?) recipient of a package of garden seeds, forwarded from Washington by the senator who represents this section of Maine. We have been honored this way on several different occasions as have many of our neighbors. What puzzles us is, what object is served by this method of procedure by our representatives in Congress.

The seeds in themselves are practically worthless, and if the object in view is to further the interests of agriculture in this country, then, in our humble opinion, the attempt is both absurd and ridiculous.

If votes are desired then, indeed, are we fallen low when a few packets of seeds will influence our votes. The people don't want the seeds. It is a foolish practice, condemned by all right thinking people, irrespective of party, but, in spite of repeated protest from all sections of the country, the practice is still continued. It is about time the farce was ended and the needless expense saved.

WEST PARIS.

Hill-Emery.

A very quiet wedding occurred last week, Thursday, April 21, at eight o'clock in the evening, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Hill when their daughter, Dora Irene, became the wife of Greenleaf Leforest Emery. Rev. I. S.
Macduff performed the wedding ceremony. The bride was becomingly gowned in pale blue tulle and wore a bouquet of orange blossoms. Only the immediate family were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Emery took the forenoon train, Saturday, for Farmington, to visit Mr. Emery's mother and sister there, for a few days. They intend to make their home here, and expect to go to housekeeping in a few weeks.

They received a number of nice presents besides the nice kitchen shower a few days before.

Dora is one of our most respected, and popular young ladies and has been a successful school teacher. Mr. Emery is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs.
Greenleaf Emery, and has been employed by the Paris Mfg. Co. for the past few years. He is a very capable young man, and it is the wish of their many friends that they may be prosperous and happy throughout their married life.

Overturned Seventy Headstones for Fun.
Detective A. P. Bassett of Norway, was recently called to investigate a raid made on a burying ground between West Paris and South Woodstock. Some seventy headstones had been tipped over and some slabs broken. It was evidently the work of boys who did not realize the enormity of the deed.

The mischief was done Tuesday afternoon and the boys had been seen. When arrested, two of the boys denied being there, and one admitted it and implicated the others. These thoughtless desperados are said to be less than a dozen years of age.

The punishment is left to the trustees of the burying ground.
